

Guillermo de Saint Malo Eleta

CEO, Eleta

Panamanian entrepreneur, philanthropist and CEO of ELETA, a diversified family investment fund originating with his grandfather Fernando Eleta. Guillermo leads investments in renewable energies, real estate, luxury tourism, telecommunications and agribusiness companies.

Guillermo also founded Canal Venture Capital, private equity fund focused in central America and the Caribbean.

As CEO of the multi-company ELETA conglomerate, Guillermo has driven innovation and sustainability principles through all enterprises, promoting good corporate governance within family businesses and serving on various company boards including ANCON, Panama's foremost nature conservation NGO.

He has a business degree from Clark University, Worcester, Massachusetts, and lives in Panama with his wife and their three children.